Columnist Rex Reed has a preview of the Peggy Lee tribute to be held at Carnegie Hall next week. He says that "Bea Arthur will take the lid off 'Big Spender.'" (How I wish I could see that! I hope that someone from here is going and will post a full report for the rest of us.)

Well, looks like we're doing two different things here. I am putting together a collection of stories from fans that have seen Bea's show and have stories about their experiences... such as what I already have on my site from fans. I'm simply going to make a nice book of the stories and pictures and send them to Bea... for something in return for what she has given to all of us. That's it. One book, non profit... just a gift. So continue on to whatever your doing, and I'll do the same.

Peace,
Kev!

The "New York Daily News" has an article about the appeal of "The Golden Girls."

The online edition of "People" has a news item about the show.

Do we have any "People" subscribers in our midst? I'm curious if the article appears in the print edition as well.

If you were looking forward to kicking back and watching the "Golden Girls" special on Independence Day, bad news! Lifetime has nixed the July 4th showing -- though its Web site reports that the special will be repeated some time in August.

On the "Maude" front, things are looking better -- thanks to TV Land's "When Casts Collide" block of programming. The network is due to air one of the Maude episodes of "All in the Family" at 10 p.m. CDT on July 4th.

Funny, but I've been looking and looking for information on Bea's trip to South Africa, and I haven't been able to find a thing about it -- till today, that is.

Here's the scoop. It looks like Bea is gonna be very, very busy this summer, as she's scheduled to take "Just Between Friends" to at least two venues in South Africa immediately prior to her trip to the West End. Get this: she'll finish her South African engagement less than a week before starting previews in London. Not bad for an octagenarian, huh?

A VERY SPECIAL GOLDEN GIRLS

SCENE: Our gal's favorite room -- the kitchen, natch. Rose and Blanche are in chairs.

DOROTHY: (walks in) Hi girls.

ROSE: Oh, Dorothy! I'm so glad you're here.

BLANCHE: Wait till you hear this one, Dorothy.

MAW: (from her stool that she pulls up to the table because they never give her a chair of her own) Oy, vey!

DOROTHY: What is it now, you dumb dye-job hick?

[audience laughs]

ROSE: Dorothy, there was another spaceship sighting last night. It's right here in the paper.

DOROTHY: When did you figure out how to read, you stupid bi*ch?

[audience laughs]

MAW: Ay caramba!

BLANCHE: (looking at her mirror) I sure could use some Martian sex, that's for sure. I haven't slept with a random person in six hours.

DOROTHY: I hope you get cancer, Blanche. [audience laughs] Rose, there's no such thing as a flying saucer. I'm smarter than you so believe it and cook my breakfast. Then go into my bedroom, hook up the trampoline, and await my orders.

BLANCHE: Well, Dorothy, I don't know...There were some awfully strange noises last night.

DOROTHY: [to Rose] I told you to keep it down last night!

ROSE: Sorry.

[Knock on the door]

BLANCHE: I'll get it.

MR. SPOCK [at front door]: Greetings, earthling.

BLANCHE: I don't believe it! [gasps]

MR. SPOCK: I know that a creature from another world might seem strange to you.

BLANCHE: Wait till you see what a creature from this world can do that's strange, mister.

[audience laughs]

MR. SPOCK: Lady, you are what late 20th Century Earth label a who--

CAPTAIN PICARD: Just a minute, Dr. Spock. That will be enough of that. We are hear to see Dorothy Zbornak.

ROSE: [enters living room, notices two men in space suits] Hello.

MR. SPOCK: Are you the one they call Dorothy?

ROSE: No. I'm the one Dorothy calls the gimp.

[audience laughs]

DOROTHY: Rose, don't forget to--- Oh, hello.

MR. SPOCK: Dorothy Zbornak, we've come here for you.

BLANCHE: [shakes her head] Why does she get the good one and I'm stuck with Baldy here.

[audience laughs]

DOROTHY: Come here for what?

CAPTAIN PICARD: You, Dorothy, hold the key to the future.

Since the board has been pretty quiet lately, I thought I'd go ahead and give y'all a heads up about an upcoming TV program.

Next month (probably during a pledge drive), your local PBS affiliate might show "Broadway's Lost Treasures," which features highlights of Tony telecasts from 1967-86. Since "Mame" premiered in 1966, I doubt that Bea will turn up anywhere in the program, but you never know...

I can't give you an exact date for the telecast in your area, as different PBS affiliates will show "Broadway's Lost Treasures" on different dates; and, of course, there's always the possibility that the program won't air on all stations.

Yeah, they played that episode last night in memory of Bob Hope. At the end of the episode it said, 'In memory of Bob Hope 1903-2003' Thought that was cool of Lifetime to do!

I thought it was quite remarkable that they were able to persuade Bob Hope to appear on The Golden Girls -- he was one of several very famous celebrities to appear on the show.
