pussycat0000...

I take that back Ironicwit! I do actually have a clip on tape that I forgot I had. It is of Bob Hope, Bea, Debbie Boone, Diahann Carroll, and Shirley Jones. (In very possibly one of his specials!) They all sing "Got Hope, Will Succeed" and it looks like it's the late 70's, maybe 1980. Sounds like this is what you were referring to!!

Have you given up hope that you'll ever see "Enemies of Laughter"? If you're fortunate enough to live in or near Los Angeles, then you can go see the movie tonight. It just opened for a limited release on August 1st. Right now, though, I can't tell you if it'll be shown in any other cities.

Speaking of Estelle...here's an interesting coincidence I noticed.

When "The Golden Girls" began its run, Sophia moved in with the girls because Shady Pines burned down.

The other night I was reading through a site about "Empty Nest" (a "Golden Girls" spinoff), and it said that Sophia had moved back into Shady Pines. I thought it was kind of intriguing.

Here's a nice interview with Bea that was featured on the BBC's Radio Four this past Friday. It runs more than six minutes.

Bea was also scheduled to appear on a South African radio show -- "Out to Lunch" on SAfm -- last Saturday.

This is an early heads-up for those of you lucky enough to get Trio. (Sadly, I am not among you.)

On September 24th, Trio will show the episode of "Late Night with David Letterman" that features Bea and Paul Reiser as guests. It airs at 10 p.m. EDT and again at 1 a.m. EDT

This was a fun find! It's funny, but when I'm listening to these kinds of interviews... I know what she is going to say to answer a question practically word for word.

Still
cute though to hear Bea get excited about certian things in her life!

Thanks,

Me and my family are lucky enough to get Trio. (We have DirecTV.) I actually have the David Letterman episode with Bea on tape already...although it isn't the best copy! So I'm looking forward to taping it this time with perfect quality! DirecTV is awesome.....way better than digital cable.

So far, I haven't been able to listen to that interview with Bea. But I know I'm not doing something right! Kev, since you've heard it, maybe you can help me!

Are you genealogically inclined? Then you may appreciate this page, which I (somehow) stumbled across. It features an image of the actual census records for Bea's family in 1930 -- that's the most recent year for which these records are publicly available. The Frankel family's listing starts on line 9. (Note that the household includes a servant.)

Last week, Bea was featured on a TV show called "Top Billing" (SABC3). In it, Ursula Stapelfeldt accompanied her while Bea shopped for antiques. (I wish we could find out more about this. Maybe one of Kevin's South African readers can tell us more.)

<http://www.tonight.co.za/index.php?fSectionId=358&fArticleId=208404>

Fast-forward to London next month:
According to www.thegoldengirlsuk.com, Bea will be a guest on "The Russell Davies Show" on BBC Radio 2 on September 14th. Lucky for those of us who live far from the UK, we should be able to listen to the show online.

This is a message for Bea's fans living in or near L.A. Rick McKay's Broadway documentary -- which features snippets of an interview with Bea -- is currently playing in L.A.

Here's the information published in the official Web site for the film (<http://www.broadwaythemovie.com/>):

"'Broadway: The Golden Age'" doesn't come to theatres till near year's end, but is doing a very quiet, Oscar-qualifying run at the Laemmle Fairfax in LA starting Friday, 8/22. The film only plays once a day, at noon, and will be there 8/22-28. LA will have a chance to see it before the rest of the country at this low-profile run. As the film will roll out with a lot of press in theatres later this year, there will be no press at all about this run, so it is only word of mouth."

I have never watched "Monk," but speaking of shows that Bea could fit in with, I have to mention "Curb your Enthusiasm." Do you guys watch that? It's a show "about" the life of the creator of Seinfeld, Larry David, but it's a bit more dry than Seinfeld. I could see Bea doing an episode.

"Monk" is a pretty quirky show with a really talented cast. So, it makes sense that Bea would be a natural for it. Is there any way that you can send in your suggestion to the network?

Do y'all remember seeing Bea on "Malcolm in the Middle"? That's a quirky show, too, and she fit in -- so well that she got an Emmy nomination for her guest appearance.

Now that we're all suggesting TV shows that we'd like to see Bea on, I've gotta add one more to the list: "The Isaac Mizrahi Show" (Oxygen Network), which is probably best described as sort of an offbeat talk show.
