Anyone else catch Angela Lansbury on Larry King Live last night? I was just channel surfing and I caught it. She talked mostly about her new TV movie but did talk a little about Mame. She didn't mention Bea, however it did show a picture of her and Bea as Mame and Vera. Angie's such a delightful person and it was nice to see her.

I thought Ms. Landsbury was great and it was a great interview. I also like the talk of her doing a sitcom which is a long time coming. And with the loss of freinds and frasier and possibly everybody loves raymond this could be a new hit

I watched Angela Lansbury, too. Even though I was disappointed that Bea didn't get a mention, I think that Angela's interest in doing a half-hour comedy could be good news for us. In a recent interview, she commented, "My friend Bea Arthur tells me it's as close to theater as you can get." If she does get her own TV show, wouldn't Bea be a logical choice for a guest shot or even a recurring role?

Bea's supposed to appear at a Peggy Lee tribute at the Hollywood Bowl on July 14th. Let's hope she makes it this time. As you may recall, she was scheduled to perform "Big Spender" at an earlier tribute to the late singer, but she apparently fell ill and couldn't participate.

Just a couple of updates for y'all...

If you subscribe to any of the premium cable channels, keep your eyes open for "Enemies of Laughter." It's the movie we've all been waiting for -- even though we don't know how much screen time Bea has. I just found out (too late to give y'all a heads up) that it was shown on TMC today. Since then, I've discovered that it was supposed to be on Showtime last month. I don't have either of these channels, so I don't have any idea how long "Enemies of Laughter" has been showing up on cable. For a long time, it disappeared from our radar screen.

According to a recent press release, "Broadway: The Golden Age" -- the documentary that features Bea -- will open in theatres this June. The DVD, which will include lots of extras, is scheduled to be released before Christmas.

I've been meaning to drop y'all a line about this...

I caught EOL on ON EMAND on Showtime the last night it was on and taped it. I admit...I found it a bit of a disappointment and a bit depressing.

Bea and Peter Falk appear together in 2 minute scenes about 4 times throughout the film. They are sitting on a sofa being interviewed by Judge Rheinholds' character, who is doing a documentary about their son (David Paymer--a sitcom writer and wannabe playwright).

You discover that his parents don't really understand him. As his life is crashing in around him, things begin happening to give him a wake-up call to open himself up to opportunities and to follow his real calling as a writer. Yeah...that's it.

Bea and Peter are fun to watch, as always. I only wish she would chose some real meaty roll to sink her teeth into. Something that shows off all her comedic and dramatic talents.

At one point, I heard she was being considered for the role of Marge Schlott (not sure about the name)...that tough-as-nails, colorful broad who owned the baseball team...can't remember which team. It was to be a story about her life. Now THAT would be interesting!!

If you've read some of the interviews that Bea did for her one-woman show, you know that she cites the late Lotte Lenya as one of her influences. (Bea's one-woman show even includes an anecdote about Lotte. The centerpiece of Bea's show -- certainly the part that has earned her the most critical recognition -- is her rendition of "Pirate Jenny," the song that Lotte sang when the two of them appeared in "Threepenny Opera" together in the mid-'50s.)

Today, the "New York Times" has a striking photo taken of Lotte Lenya when she was rehearsing the part of Jenny for the world premiere of "Threepenny Opera" in the late 1920s. The photo is currently on display at The Jewish Museum (Manhattan) as part of an exhibition of the works of yet another Lotte -- photographer Lotte Jacobi.

Hi all ::

Ok, put on your thinking caps! Take a few minutes if needed and gather you most intriguing questions about Bea if you were to actually be able to speak with Bea, herself, over a cup of coffee. What would you ask, that you haven't been able to find out through other means, such as television interviews, magazine articles and web sites. Please post your questions here with your name and email address in the event that I need to contact you.

Thanks a bunch in advance!

Thanks for asking, Kevin. Mind telling us why you're interested in questions? Anything special going on?

I've got a couple of rough ideas of things I'd like to ask. One concerns her past; the other, her future.

(1) We all know that, as a young adult, Bea studied the performing arts at the New School. What sort of training did she receive prior to that (piano lessons, dance lessons, etc.)? And did she show early promise as a performer? (Did she knock 'em dead reciting the Gettysburg Address in second grade...or wow her classmates at a high school talent show?)

(2) Now that she has met the challenge of performing in a one-woman show, does she have any other career goals? "King Lear" is probably out of the question, so what else would she like to do that remains undone? Are there any TV series that would tempt her to be a guest star? (Another of the visitors to this board would dearly love to see her on "Monk." I would, too.)

After seeing the "People" photo on your Web site, Kevin, I'm startin' to get excited about the TVLand Awards. If we're lucky, the Awards may be especially interesting for us Bea fans. According to a recent article about Adrienne Barbeau, there was supposed to be a "Maude" reunion at the TVLand Awards. Aside from Bea, at least three other members of the cast were scheduled to be there: Adrienne, Bill Macy, and Conrad Bain. Let's hope the article's right.

Well, what fun was that??? :) I had a great time watching the spoof on Sex in the City tonight on the TV Land Awards.

If you missed the show, I'm sure TV Land will replay the crap out of it over the next few weeks... so check your local listings!

Also, I just posted on <http://www.beatricearthur.com> screenshots of Bea in her golden locks! So cute!!

As for the awards themselves... well, not as good as last years... yes, I still miss John Ritter a lot! I'm personally not a big fan of Brad Garret. But, overall it was still a nice show!

Hope you all enjoyed it, share your comments!

Take care and talk to you all soon!

Bea was magnificent. Our girl's definitely still got it! Her ocular movements were priceless. Now I'm ready for a sequel to the "sequel" (or, at the very least, a guest shot on another sitcom. Hm-m-m-m, "Arrested Development" -- tomorrow's classic show -- seems to be a good choice).

For Bea's fans who don't have access to the TVLand Awards show, the TVLand site has a slide show of "Sex & The Classics."

The SATC spoof was great. Bea was hilarious!!!! I especially loved the part when she put metamucil in her martini! Usually my family makes fun of me for being a Bea fan, but my dad, mom, and brother & sister all joined in to watch. My dad might even have been laughing even harder than me at the spoof! It was great FUN getting to see Bea again! She was awesome as she always is. My only complaint might be that I didn't see Bea anywhere in the audience.....sure saw Betty though.
