Tour dates and venues are still awfully hard to come by. Last weekend, when the show was in Cincinnati, a newsgroup poster received an itinerary from the road manager. Funny, but that itinerary still showed the old information; it didn't reflect any of the updates.

Hey there... Ironically, just about an hour ago, I updated my site to reflect the tour date changes. Now, I see that you organized the dates here wonderfully. So, later tonight or tomorrow I'm going to go back and add the urls that you provided here as well. Thanks for doing the research and organizing this information in a orderly fashion.

Take care and talk to you soon, kev!

Dear Vectorlime:

Thank you for the chat link. I love reading Bea's chats and articles. I'm always amazed by her energy at 75, I really wish to make to that age with her humor, intelligence and energy.

Too bad I don't have money now to go to the US to see Bea live - I'm Brazilian. Well, let's hope I'll have a chance someday.

Yours,
Marcos.

Very interesting... I will try to contact them tomorrow via email or even a phone call if need be. I'm just as interested in their interview with Neil Tennant. How exciting Bea Arthur and the Pet Shop Boys in the same article... a personal dream come true... hehehe!

Thanks for bringing this to my attention (as always) !!

Take care,

This is primary for Kevin, there is an updated schedule on the andthentheresbea.com website. I'm so happy to see that she's coming to Detroit too!! So I get to see her 2 more times (additional to the 2 times I've seen her already)!!!

- Fabulous, thanks for pointing out the update. I really never thought they would update their page... but they finally did! I am also excited that she is going to be in Detroit. That is close enough to Chicago, where I live, that I can easily see her for the 4th and/or 5th time!
I will reflect the changes on my site as well.
Thanks for the tip off!

Please let us know how it is - I am going on Saturday and Sunday - driving down from CT and spending the weekend in Nyack - I saw her last year in CT but know she has changed it a little. Also would be interesting to know how you met her, if you do.

Just a reminder: Practically all of the articles I've been finding about the tour have errors. Usually they're pretty trivial; that's why I don't even mention them.
Also, after reading that the official tour site had been updated, I checked it out. As far as I can tell, the revised tour schedule ain't perfect either. For instance, it's still showing Galveston on November 10th only. However, the theatre web site indicates that Ms. Arthur will perform on the 10th and 11th. Some of the other "official" dates are questionable as well.

Thank you, Kevin. I appreciate your taking the time to post that. After reading the article, I'd say that the teaser was more than a little misleading. Even so, I think that you've got some great material to use whenever people start questioning her sexuality. (For me, it's also kind of interesting to read her comments in light of her Tallulah anecdote...)

An aside: A friend of mine pointed out another possible mistake in the new tour schedule. She thinks that "Lynchburg, PA" should probably be "Lynchburg, VA" -- and I think that she's probably right.

Subject: Bea Arthur in Nyack, New York map_06516
✉ Send Email
- Just recently drove home to Connecticut after seeing Ms. Arthur in New York on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon! What an experience. I saw her last year in CT and she has added to her show - she was absolutely superb - her voice was strong and she was in an excellent mood! On the first night I had a seat in the first row, first seat, right in front of her - she made eye contact with me several times and even smiled. I also bought her a dozen roses and asked the security manager at the theater if she would be signing autographs later - he said no since her ankle was still swollen she was supposed to keep off of it but he told me that I could walk onto the stage and give her the flowers at the end of the show since she would enjoy that - he told me just don't make her fall. She said she is fine and it won't interrupt her tour, but the swelling won't go down.

At the final curtain call I walked up the stairs to the stage and handed her the flowers and kissed her and hugged her and told her she was brilliant. She said that since we were a great audience she would add one song - "The Man in the Moon is a Lady" from Mame. She said she vowed she would never do it again but she did it for us! The standing ovations both when she started the show and ended it brought tears to her eyes.

Well low and behold some of us waited almost an hour by the stage door and she did come out and sign autographs - she was shocked that so many people would want to meet her. As she was signing autographs she said she felt like Madonna and someone said, yes, but we wouldn't wait for Madonna! Some of us just reached out to her and she took our hands - she stayed for about 1/2 hour and then got into her limo.

On Sunday's matinee she came out but did not sign since she had to go eat and then rest for her 7:00 show that night, but the theater manager said we could stay if we respected her privacy - which we did - I think we overwhelmed her on Saturday night - again she walked to the car and put out her hand to shake hands with people and then waved at us through the window - she kept saying in the car that she could not believe this - that we would come out and wait for her.

I highly recommend her show to everyone - she was fun, intimate and down to earth. You could tell that all of the songs she sang had some special meaning to her since on some of them you could tell that she was holding back tears. She is a warm and caring person - she was very gracious on Saturday when she signed autographs when she really did not have to - she is the best.

I hope that everyone else who goes to the show going forward enjoys themselves as much as I have - she is truly a remarkable woman - going to all those cities - her energy is incredible! I am hoping that I get to one more performance close to CT before she opens on Broadway next spring.

God bless Bea Arthur.
