#2141 From: ironicwit Date: Thu Jul 15, 2004 8:38 pm Subject: Review of Peggy Lee Tribute

Reuters and "Hollywood Reporter" both have the same review of last night's tribute to the late singer Peggy Lee at the Hollywood Bowl. Here's what the article says about Bea's performance:

"Brassy Bea Arthur turned in a delicate reading of 'The Shining Sea,' accompanied by lovely harp from Carol Robbins, then, with nimble guitarist John Pisano vamping behind her, she was just shy of bawdy, as she talked about Joan Crawford in the cheesy Western 'Johnny Guitar.' She redeemed herself with her treatment of Lee's theme song for the film.

I found another review of the tribute to Peggy Lee, who died in 2002. Here's an excerpt:

"A number of veteran artists were on hand to honor Lee... The oldest, at 81, was Bea Arthur, whose voice quavered a bit, but she proved she could still convincingly deliver a song with emotion ('The Shining Sea') and tell a funny story with 'Maude'-like bluntness."

<http://u.redlandsdailyfacts.com/Stories/0,1413,217~24270~2274431,00.html>

Chicago will be the site of a tribute to Peggy Lee next week. But Bea's name isn't on the list of scheduled performers. Last year, Bea was supposed to appear at a Peggy Lee tribute in NYC, but she apparently had to bow out because of sickness.

This page has an article about Bea's upcoming performance at El Portal Theatre (Aug. 5-8). In this case, though, the focus isn't Bea; it's Billy Goldenberg, her partner in her one-woman show. It turns out that Billy sold his home to a co-owner of the theatre and his wife. Their new next-door neighbors suggested that Bea and Billy take the show to El Portal.

Thank you for participating in the latest balloting for the Motion Picture Hall of Fame website. The voting has been quite steady this round and every category is very close in votes. We have enjoyed forming this site for the classic movie fans and have tried to make it easy and accessible to all. If you find you are having trouble accessing the site, please feel free to email us at this address.

motionpicturehalloffame@earthlink.net

Some of you have voted for past inductees or voted for a category and the vote breaks the 20 year rule. If you have found that you have done this in error, you are more than welcome to change your vote. If you don't know if you have made an error on your ballot, please feel free to email us. We will be glad to email back a list of your ballot choices.

To check out the results of the recent ballot or to check out the recent inductees, go to the website.

<http://home.earthlink.net/~motionpicturehalloffame/>

We are currently working with corporate sponsors and other foundations to house the Motion Picture Hall of Fame on its own building site. We are working with the city of Elkhart, Indiana on an abandoned site that is perfect for this site. This project is on the ground floor and just in the development stage. As new progress comes about, it will be reported on the main site.

The corporate sponsor, foundations and city are now waiting for reports from us, the Motion Picture Hall of Fame website, to see if this will be a popular site. We need your help by contacting any classic movie fan that you know and encouraging them to vote in this induction ballot session. We are also asking for donations to help fund this project. This is strictly voluntary and each contributor will get a detailed accounting each month by email.

If you are unable to do either, please feel to email with your intent to visit the building site.

Subject: A New Interview & a Reminder

Backstage.com has a new interview with "Queen Bea," apparently done to promote her appearance at North Hollywood's El Portal Theatre.

http://www.backstage.com/backstage/features/article_display.jsp?vnu_content_id=1000592096

Don't forget to check the broadcast schedule for your local PBS affiliate. It's pledge time (or will soon be pledge time), and, if you're lucky, your PBS station will be among those showing "Broadway's Lost Treasures II." The broadcast is of interest to Bea fans because it's supposed to include Bea singing "Bosom Buddies" with her pal Angela Lansbury.

Unfortunately, Theatermania columnist Peter Filichia found this rendition of the number quite disappointing. Writes Filichia:

"Also on Broadway's Lost Treasures II are Angela Lansbury and Bea Arthur doing 'Bosom Buddies.' Alas, the performance is not from 1966 - again, a year before the first national broadcast -- but from a more recent Tony show. Seeing these two ol' pros selling the number decades later is certainly nice, even though Arthur twice comes in late. But we do have Arthur in her prime doing the song in the movie of Mame, albeit with a woefully inferior partner; so I'd rather have had 'Life Is' from Zorba or the title number from The Happy Time with Robert Goulet looking charming and sounding great, years before he became a seedy joke."

Darn, I've seen that performance that they are talking about in Broadway's Lost Treasures... I was really hoping it was going to be from some lost footage of the actual 66' performance... O'well I'll still watch it.

Good article... but, am I the only one who is sick of the lack of creativity on the writers parts with their titles for their Bea articles... I should look and see how many of her articles are titled 'Queen Bea'

How unoriginal hehehe :)

All good though!

Kevin, you're not the only one who's sick of reading about "Queen Bea." But I guess most people haven't read as many different articles about her as you and I have, so that title probably isn't as offensive to them as it is to us.

I remember seeing Bea and Angie perform "Bosom Buddies" on the Tonys several years ago (I believe it was during the 1998 broadcast). But I'm not certain if that's the version that's included in "Broadway's Lost Treasures II." I've been under the impression that the numbers in the show were on Tony broadcasts prior to that.

While we're waiting to find out, here's another new interview that you're sure to enjoy reading. If you're going to be in Amsterdam at the beginning of September, you might be lucky enough to catch a glimpse of Bea, who'll be attending a wedding there.

Make sure you watch "Broadway's Lost Treasures II" during the current PBS pledge drive. Bea and Angela Lansbury perform "Bosom Buddies" in the opening minutes of the show. Theirs is actually the second number of the evening, and it's a pleasure to watch. Judging from the Tony Web site, this dates from the 1987 award show.

I thought that y'all might appreciate reading what the "Boston Globe" had to say about Bea's trip to Provincetown for her concert tonight.

"BEA QUIET! SHE'S REHEARSING"

"After getting a little rest and settling in, performer Bea Arthur was rehearsing with her pianist at the White Wind Inn in Provincetown yesterday getting ready for tonight's sold-out performance at Town Hall as part of Carnival Week. Not that anyone bothered Arthur as she ran through her show in the afternoon with tourists, guests, and others walking around the inn's first floor. Then again, it's Provincetown. It takes more than a '70s TV icon to frazzle the locals. But it did take a little maneuvering by Cape Air to get Arthur to the Outer Cape. Arthur's flight into Logan arrived after 10 Thursday night, too late for her to catch any flight to P-town on the regular schedule. So a fresh crew was arranged and more than a few of the regular Cape Air staff lined up to make sure Arthur's special flight went off without a hitch. Ah, the power of 'Golden Girls' and 'Maude' reruns."

Another little write up on Bea THE TERRORIST :) I'm loving this!

Bea wasn't so golden in Boston
 Former Golden Girls star Bea Arthur reportedly triggered a security scare at Boston airport when she tried to board a short-haul flight with a pocketknife in her handbag. "She started yelling that it wasn't hers and said 'the terrorists put it there.' She kept yelling about the 'terrorists, the terrorists, the terrorists,' " United Press International quotes a fellow passenger as telling the World Entertainment News Network. It reported that after the knife was seized, the exasperated 81-year-old actress pulled a key ring from her bag and told the agent it belonged to the "terrorists," before throwing it at staff. She continued her apparent taunting of security officials as she boarded her flight, allegedly telling an agent "We're all doomed," according to Philadelphia Daily News entertainment columnist Howard Gensler.
