Oh! I'd love to have some of these, as well... and her songs from the Shoestring Revue and '57, if anyone can share them. (I have as mp3's the two from Threepenny, if anyone wants them.)

Well, now that I'm wishing, I'll wish for a copy of the Beatrice Arthur Special from 1980, too. I haven't had time to devote to searching the 'net for the proper place to find such things, but then, why not ask here?

Bea was a guest on NPR's "Fresh Air" yesterday. I can't tell you if there are any remarkable revelations, as I haven't tried to listen to the audio yet since I'm on a slow Internet connection. But I didn't want to keep the rest of y'all waiting to listen to it...

If you can get your hands on the cast recording of "The Threepenny Opera," you can see what Bea looked like in the mid-1950s. She appears to be a part of the group photo on the cover, which you can see at amazon.com. The booklet that comes with the CD also includes a small B&W photo of Bea and fellow performer Scott Merrill.

<http://www.amazon.com/Threepenny-Opera-1954-Blitzstein-Adaptation/dp/B00004X09T>

The CD of "Shoestring Revue" includes an insert with two not-very-clear B&W photos of Bea. One shows her dressed in a trench coat while singing "Garbage"; the other depicts her in an evening gown during the number "Couldn't Be Happier." (I don't know if this CD is still available other than through online auctions.)

Thanks so much for posting the link!

Yes, it's always nice to hear her. It sounded as if, for a second, we might get a new answer to "What's your life like, now?" *sigh* But she's doing well, apparently, so what else matters?

I just love that Jealousy Duet! She DOES sound great, and I'm glad they included it.

I let a friend hear that song last week, and all he said, with great admiration, was "Who is that girl?"--meaning the OTHER girl, not Bea. Aaaah! I suppose I should've expected that, but when pressed, my friend finally admitted that Bea sounded good, too. He's watched all of the season one Maude with me, and that's appreciation enough.

So, for the sake of discussion, if you were to choose any other scene/dialogue from Maude to start off this interview, rather than the bit from "Maude's Dilemma," what would you choose?

I'd have to watch it again to be more specific, but I'd probably pick something from "The Convention" episode, or if it was available, something from "The Analyst."--Maude by herself.

I've always thought Rue to be the most charming and well-manared of them all, even in real-life. But, i must say, to talk as though Bea may have been the soure of Estelle's trouble...well, that strikes me as bad taste, indeed! So, i'm surprised- coming from her.

And, another thing, i wonder what Bea's reaction would be to her speculations? I'm sure she would be at least slightly offended. Heck, i know i would! But, then-again, w/ so many pple refering to her as this "intimidating" (having something to do w/ her deep voice, no doubt) kind of person, she's probably used to it, by now.

Hey everyone,

I have a question:

I, of course, am a very liberal, leftist-thinking person. But, strangely enough, i keep ending-up with some quite conservative friends. I guess that proves that oposites attract, but that definitely doesn't mean that we don't disagree. Without a doubt, there are some things i believe in, which would be better left unsaid to most of my friends.

Anyway, i must admite that it is my liberalism that has attracted me to Bea Arthur, and to "Maude". But, at the same time, i would love to share the fun w/ my friends, by watching "Maude" with them someday. So, i was wondering, could it be possilbe for "conservatives" to like the show too, despite its very liberal themes, such as abortion?

I ask specifically about the abortion topic, because one of my friends in particular is a very pro-life person- so, i'm not sure how the show would fair with her. I mean, she knows i'm a liberal, but she doesn't know i'm pro-choice; although, to my way of thinking, liberalism & pro-choice go hand'n hand, so it shouldn't be too hard for her to figure-out, right?

Well, what i'm really trying to ask is- could a pro-life person appreciate "Maude" even if they don't like the abortion episode? I mean, it was only 2 episodes out of the entire series that dealt w/ the topic.

For that matter though, would it be possible for a conservative to like the show, period? Cause, it's actually one of my favs. But, due to some of the subject-matter, i'm always a little uneasy about showing my friends, esp. if i know them to be conservative.

Bottom-line- if there are any conservative and/or pro-life members here, i'd like to hear from you. I'd pretty much like to hear everyone's opinion on this issue. Please reply. Thanks!

Hi storybellz,

I very much enjoy the show, and I'm a pro-life person. I don't believe in abortion, and I don't want to start a debate here about it, since it's not the subject at hand. And I'm not that much into politics, especially the American one (I'm from Canada). But I would assume that a person who is pro-life, politically conservatively involved would appreciate the show just as much as you do. What's not to like?! 😊 Many subjects are hilariously tackled, and even if you're not "for" them, you can still appreciate the subtlety of it all. As for the abortion episode, don't sweat it. Your friend(s) will like it anyway. Yes it talks about abortion, and yes Maude will do it, but the way the subject is brought makes it understandable for a pro-life person. As I said, I'm pro-life, but it doesn't mean I don't respect the point of view of a pro-choice person. So don't worry, share the "Maude experience" with your friends, and they'll probably like it too.

I'll answer one of your questions with another question:

Can a liberal enjoy "All in the Family"? I don't see why not. (Hey, even Sammy Davis, Jr. must have enjoyed it enough to guest star alongside that lovable bigot Archie Bunker.)

If a liberal can laugh at Archie Bunker, a conservative should be able to find humor in Maude Findlay, whom Bea herself has described as well-meaning, but flawed.

I completely believe that liberals enjoy the show (hmm, I wonder why? :) But that is one of the brilliant things about the show, is that if anything I feel it makes the conservatives look foolish more then the liberals via Archie's voice and opinions. Michael balances the discussions with an opposite view that is over the top... so you get the widest range of views throughout the show compared to most any other one... even Maude to an extent when I think about it. I think liberals and conservatives can equally laugh at the show though it would usually be at each others expense.

That's just what I'm thinking off the top of my head... I'm suppose to be working now, so I best get back to that :)

Kev!
(also a huge All In The Family fan, but not going to make a web site about it :)

Yeah, but you gotta admit, Maude sort of pushed the envelope, more than any of them! But, now you got me thinking- do you think a devout Christian would enjoy the show, since that would imply extremly conservative views?

I only ask, because I'm new at the whole friendship thing, and don't want to scare my buddy off. I love her very much, and she says that what i believe is between me and God, and that she likes me, dispite our differing view-points. But, like i said, i'm kinda new at any sort of real relationship- even if it be strictly platonic. Silly, i know, but true.

So, that's why a came here, to get a little advice, and maybe a small nudge from you guys. Thanks to you for responding, and thanks in advance, to all who will respond.

OK, just to give you guys an idea of exactly the kind of person i'm talking about, here's my friend's web-profile:

<http://my.care2.com/natalialove>

Take a look at it, and then tell me what you think, as far as her level of conservativeness goes. I know this is kinda strange, but i'm still at the begining stage of our friendship. So, like i said, just look at her profile, then tell me what you think. P.S. I'm on her profile too, as a friend, so you can see my page, and then realize how strickingly different out views are. We really like eachother though. So, i guess this is really more of a psyco-socialogical question, but i just wonder if it's truly possible for a conservative & a liberal to remain friends.

I mean, when opening-up to a conservative, i feel like a gay, who's just come-out- which i am, by the way, but that's besides the point.

Thanks to those of you who actually look at her page.

God, I wish you lived in my city. :) I'd LOVE to have a friend to watch Maude with and discuss with. Yes, I live among a bunch of Arthur Harmon types. :)

I haven't thought this out well enough to reply yet; forgive me if it's disorganized.

I've wondered about this, too, as I'm in the same situation! I'm a little apprehensive about showing Maude to the local friend I spend most time with, and I decided just not to, unless she asks. (Not unthinkable, as I have gone on about how much I've enjoyed this first DVD.) Although in the case of my friend, she knows I'm a bit liberal, so it wouldn't be a great shock—I try never to mention things that we might argue over... although I wonder why—is anyone being so careful of MY feelings?

You could just skip the abortion shows altogether, I suppose. On the other hand, if it's truly that disturbing, one's friends should be able to speak up for themselves and say so. Or maybe they CAN handle it, realize it's only a TV show, and is meant to be funny, for the most part.

This is a tough one. I'm interested to know what the rest of you think about this, too.

So, who's organizing the Maude fan convention, so we can enjoy it without reserve? :)

Christina

Hey everyone,

I have a question:

I, of course, am a very liberal, leftist-thinking person. But, strangely enough, i keep ending-up with some quite conservative friends. I guess that proves that oposites attract, but that definitely doesn't mean that we don't disagree. Without a doubt, there are some things i believe in, which would be better left unsaid to most of my friends.

Anyway, i must admite that it is my liberalism that has attracted me to Bea Arthur, and to "Maude". But, at the same time, i would love to share the fun w/ my friends, by watching "Maude" with them someday. So, i was wondering, could it be possilbe for "conservatives" to like the show too, despite its very liberal themes, such as abortion?

I ask specifically about the abortion topic, because one of my friends in particular is a very pro-life person- so, i'm not sure how the show would fair with her. I mean, she knows i'm a liberal, but she doesn't know i'm pro-choice; although, to my way of thinking, liberalism & pro-choice go hand'n hand, so it shouldn't be too hard for her to figure-out, right?

Well, what i'm really trying to ask is- could a pro-life person appreciate "Maude" even if they don't like the abortion episode? I mean, it was only 2 episodes out of the entire series that dealt w/ the topic.

For that matter though, would it be possibe for a conservative to like the show, period? Cause, it's actually one of my favs. But, due to some of the subject-matter, i'm always a little uneasy about showing my friends, esp. if i know them to be conservative.

Bottom-line- if there are any conservative and/or pro-life members here, i'd like to hear from you. I'd pretty much like to hear everyone's oppinion on this issue. Please reply. Thanks!

Excellent point. (THAT'S what I forgot to say in my other message.)

>even Sammy Davis, Jr. must have enjoyed it enough to guest star

He gets around. LOL I'm sorry for this, but I'm tired of seeing him! I just watched his All In the Family ep, and TVland showed the Jeffersons episode with him, as well. Twice in the same week is enough. Please tell me he WON'T turn up in the Findlay house!

>alongside that lovable bigot Archie Bunker.)

He is, isn't he? :) I enjoy him more, the older I get, although I don't find myself agreeing with him any more than I did ten years ago when I couldn't stand him. Now I appreciate the humor. (and from Archie, I learned that I'm "colorless" LOL)

Oh, how i wish i could enjoy it with a fan like you too! Based on your posts here, i think you and i would have a great time together, plus you are near my age- I am 21. Anyway, there's deffinitely something to be said for internet aquantices!

Salud amiga!

P.S.

Yeah, everyone on this site should organize a "Maude" block-party, and we should meet, hang-out, and enjoy it together! That's a spontaneous, wild, and lovely idea! I vote for Kev to be the official organizer of it! So, who's with me?!

(Not unthinkable, as I have gone on about how much I've enjoyed this first DVD.) Although in the case of my friend, she knows I'm a bit liberal, so it wouldn't be a great shock--I try never to mention things that we might argue over... although I wonder why--is anyone being so careful of MY feelings?

Yes! My two closest friends of the last five years are people I met online, on book lists and such. I've never met them, but we talk on the phone every week. I'm planning to actually visit one this summer.

I wanted to send you a little note off list, only it doesn't display your email address. If you wouldn't mind, could you send me a message, off list, please? Might be fun to chat. ?

Thanks.

Hey Gang---I am new to the group - delighted to have found you all!
Does anyone know how Bea feels about growing up in the small town of Cambridge on Maryland's Eastern Shore? My understanding is that her parents owned a small department store there called Frankel's, and that they were the only Jewish family in town. I wonder if she experienced any anti-semitism, if she has gone back to visit the town, if she made any life-long friends from there, etc. I am from Baltimore, and every summer I drive thru Cambridge en route to Maryland's Ocean City on the Atlantic Coast; I've always wondered about her early life in Maryland.
Anyone got any info on this? Thanks! :-) Stefan

Marcia Rodd is also in another Season 2 episode of "All In The Family". She plays an ex-girlfriend of Mike, who leaves her son at the Bunker's house for the night and implies that he is Mike's kid.

She's also in a season 6 episode, "Walter's Temptation." She's an employee of Walter's.

Here's a little synopsis copied from someone's website:

Maude is to be a guest on a talk show with Walter and a female employee, to discuss women's rights. When Walter fires the employee over her propositioning him with an affair, he has a hard time telling Maude. Moments before the show is to be filmed, Maude finds out about the firing over the proposition.

This is a myth, isn't it, so such a picture can't exist.
