Interesting... something to keep an eye out for.
 Crazy scheduling... now four shows of Maude a day? I wonder if they are trying to meet their quota of shows so they can cancel or continue it. Time will tell.
 Thanks for the info.kev!lgt2.combeatricearthur.com

Personally, I would LOVE to see the show moved to Nick at Nite. I don't have TV Land at home or at school, but I've been wanting to to be able to watch Maude for the LONGEST time. So, recently, my uncle started taping it for me (TV Land was just added where he lives). I got 8 episodes, and now they're taking it off. Figures. LOL! I'm certainly not holding my breath, but there is a teeny tiny chance that it MIGHT eventually get moved to Nick at Nite. I Love Lucy was recently moved from Nick at Nite to TV Land, as were a few other shows (and vice versa), I believe. Of course, Maude moving to N@N would be too good to be true, so I'm not counting on it!-Katie

Way back when...Maude was on N@N. There used to be really good shows on N@N-- Like, TMTMS was on, and me, being the Betty White fan I am, would love to see it back on N@N, As well as Maude and the Munsters...I hate schedules.Lauren Yeah I really hate to get off the subject of Bea but I personally think N@N sucks nowadays! I remember back in '96 when we first got cable N@N used to be so much better. I just can't stand Cheers or Family Ties. And why in the world did they take off The Facts Of Life? I prefer to tune to TV Land! And hopefully they'll wise up and put Maude on at a better time than 4:30am!

It was only a possibility awhile back in the tour planning.":( I'm very upset about it. I was planning on going at least twice. I wish the And Then There's Bea website would be just a tad bit more up-to-date than what it is.

I'm not from your part of the country, so this may be a dumb question. Would it be possible for you to see the show in Pennsylvania? She's got three shows lined up for the beginning of November. As far as I know, they're still scheduled.Towanda, PA - November 2 target=new><http://www.bcrac.org/adult.html>Wilkes-Barre, PA - November 4 target=new><http://www.kirbycenter.org/>Easton, PA - November 6 target=new><http://www.statetheatre.org/>*****The official web site for "...And Then There's Bea" has been a complete disappointment to me, too. The whole thing is done in Flash, so I've always suspected that the site was more a learning exercise for the webmaster than a useful source of information for Billy and Bea's fans. It would have been far better for the webmaster to have done a simple HTML site. That way, he or she could update it quite easily, and those of us who do NOT have broadband connections wouldn't find it such a pain to navigate. In addition, the individual pages would show up in search engines.

I can verify that the November 6th show in Easton is definitely still on. I called the theater yesterday because I will be driving three hours and staying overnight so I had to be sure - of course anything can happen between now and then. I would also think that ticketmaster might have some information since I remember seeing them selling tickets early on in the tour.Maribeth

When was Maude on N@N? I used watch that a lot, but I don't remember Maude ever being on it. Did it come on very late at night? I remember MTM, though, even though I never watched it. During the time I watched N@N, they were showing really old shows like Donna Reed, Patty Duke, Mr. Ed, Green Acres, etc. Although, even if Maude was on, I wouldn't have paid any attention to it, as I was only in elementary or middle school. But now more than ever, I wish Maude would return to N@N!-Katiehttp://www.ruemccclanahan.net

- A couple of years ago, I watched "Maude" on Nick for about three weeks before it disappeared from the channel. I'm guessing that Nick must have started showing it at the same time TVLand added "Maude" to the line-up (August 1999, I believe). The only reason I knew that "Maude" was on was because I was flipping through the channels late one night -- and, lo and behold, there it was. As I recall, Nick stopped showing it in October 1999, so I had to start watching "The Golden Girls" in order to get my Bea "fix."

I am hoping that someone knows the name of one of the songs Bea sings in her show. She gave credit to every song she sang except for this one, a lovely ballad that she sings sitting in darkened mood-lighting in the second half. I am hoping that someone has a song list that she published or is even vaguely knowing what I am talking about. I wish I could give more information. Let me know what you thinkMaybe the song was about a break-up of a relationship and the singer was separating items of her life, etc. Anxious to hear ideas! Breugnon
