Yes, they have been rearranging the tour dates a lot lately... and it is bad on their part that they don't update their site accordingly. I haven't on my site either because its really hard to keep up with these unannounced changes. The problem with the official tour site, is that it is completely created in Flash format... making it very time consuming to update it for one. Looks like their PR person has some work to do, huh!

I also have a problem with Bea's show being called strictly a Cabaret performance... I agree with you that it is more of a musical performance. Her show doesn't change per the audiences reaction like most cabarets tend to do... its hard to say... I think there is a fine line where Bea's show falls into. Whatever it is... still fantastic!

It won't come on TV... I wish someday that we can get it on DVD... but there is a 99.9% probability that will never happen. An audio cd version is more probable... but still not certain... besides, it wouldn't be released until quite a while after her shows are over with.

Bea's show is right now an off-broadway production, on a country wide tour. They are still deciding whether or not to bring it to Broadway or not.

That is such a shame that some of her dates are being cut. I still cannot understand why?

Also, I'm a little concerned about her coming to St. Louis. I recently went to ticketmaster.com just to see if tickets were available and St. Louis wasn't even on that list!!
Does anybody know anything about St. Louis because I would LOVE to see her again.
Please somebody let me know any info!!
Thanks!

Flash is precisely why I don't like the official tour site. I've got a dial-up connection, and it takes me an eternity to download the thing. Lifetime isn't updating the tour schedule either, and it would be the easiest thing in the world for them to make the changes.

If I seem overly interested in getting the actual dates and venues, it's because I need them in order to search for interviews and reviews. Also, this is such a rare opportunity for those of us who don't live in major cities. So, if new places are being added to the tour, I'd like to be able to share that info with fans who might miss out on the chance of seeing her otherwise.

http://www.ticketmaster.com/cgi/cs/cs_venueartist.idc?searchname=BEA_ARTHUR&vaxname=CH3&venueum=614

It looks like the St. Louis engagement has been trimmed back to two days only: Sept. 21-22. (I found this page by going through the CitySearch site, which had a link to Ticketmaster.)

To be on the safe side, you might want to call the theatre itself.

- Erica and Erika--Before you go, just make sure that your parents know that this is a "mature" show. In a couple of spots, it goes quite a bit further than "The Golden Girls."

There were no kids at the 3 shows that I went to. It also depends on the venue where the shows are held at. Some do not allow people below the age of 18 or 21 (if alcohol is served). The venue I went to, Park West, had alcohol served... which was wonderful, being that i adore my cranberry and vodkas.

The show is intended for mature audiences. If your going only because you know Bea from Golden Girls, then you most likely will not be entertained. The show is about Bea's life and career... its good if you have some theatre knowledge before hand, so you get the jokes and stories that she talks about.

Just FYI

I agree with Kevin - I saw her one woman show in Connecticut last year and I was the youngest one in the audience and I am 40 years old. Kevin is correct in that the show focuses on her 25 years in the theater which she had before she started Maude in 1972. I knew what she was talking about as one of my majors in college was theater and I remember some of the names from the theater history courses I took. The show is great and I am going to see her for two back to back shows in Nyack later this month. Even though she does not focus on her TV characters, if you really love her, as I do, you won't be disappointed.

It was interesting meeting her as she appears to be much shyer than the characters she has created. She is a brilliant actor and am glad that I am having another opportunity to see her again.

Yes I really appreciate your posting the sites as I try to do a search for the newspapers of the towns she is performing in every other day, but sometimes with work it is hard to do this - also you always seem to find everything whereas I always miss a lot.

Thanks again.

I think that that a lot of things you'll find on the web about Ms. Arthur are jokes. That site is one of them. Don't take it as truth; somebody is just having a little fun.

Right now, our favorite Golden Gal is scheduled to tour with her show through the very beginning of January, 2002. Her ultimate goal is to take the show to Broadway next spring (according to "USA Today," she's also considering London).

If you really, really want to see the show, I would suggest that you take a look at the official tour schedule and figure out which city is closest to you. Then check out the web site for the theatre where she'll be playing, and take it from there.

When I saw the show in Austin, I remember seeing at least one youngster. After the second performance, the house manager told me that the show seemed to be attracting older people as well as a lot of gay couples.

One comment on her shyness: I know that many performers are said to be shy. However, everything I've heard about Ms. Arthur leads me to believe that she is unusually shy. That's a subject I know quite a bit about, so I can really sympathize with her.
