Subject: Raffle of Script Signed by Bea

Those of you living in Ohio might be interested in this news item. The Wyandot County Humane Society will be celebrating Pawzfest on Sunday, May 16. Among items to be raffled off during the event is a "real Hollywood script" autographed by Bea.

Subject: Can i get some help -PLUS- Vote for Maude on DVD!!!

Hey guys (and gals!) just wondering if there is anyone here on this list who would be willing to make me a tape of some Maude episodes im missing... ? Looking for someone who is SERIOUS about doing it... someone in the past said he/she would, but aparently just strung me along... i am missing the 3-part finale, plus the 3 Christmas episodes from the last 3 seasons... I am totally willing to pay for the VHS tape, shipping, and even compensation for the time to dub them... if anyone can help me out, PLEASE email me at thenextbestthing77@yahoo.com

Also, just thought i'd let everyone know there is a NEW poll to get Maude on DVD!!! It's from the official Columbia-TriStar Home Video site, so let's ALLLLL vote often and try to get Maude on DVD!! Can you imagine! seeing the 4-5 minutes that were cut out of EACH and every episode for TV Land!?!?

TV Land's "Moguls" series features some things of interest to us . . .

May 5--"Moguls: The 70s Part 1" Features Norman Lear.
Followed by--are you ready for this?--a "Maude" episode (#1)!!
May 19--"Moguls: The 80s" Features the "Golden Girls" producers.

Here's the schedule:

Yes of course Dorothy is my favorite, but after her I'd have to say Blanche. Her sex-crazed persona is too hysterical.

McKay's "Broadway: The Golden Age" Makes NYC Film Premiere June 11
 By Andrew Gans
 11 Jun 2004

"Broadway: The Golden Age, By the Legends Who Were There," a new film from documentarian Rick McKay, opens in New York June 11.

The documentary, which features interviews with dozens and dozens of Broadway stars, begins its New York run at the Angelica Film Center and City Cinemas Sutton. The unrated film has a running time of 114 minutes and explores the fabled Golden Age of Broadway. Among the stars who were interviewed for McKay's film are Elaine Stritch, Shirley MacLaine, Ann Miller, Kim Hunter, Jeremy Irons, Tommy Tune, Angela Lansbury, Carol Burnett, Patricia Neal and Stephen Sondheim.

McKay -- a native of Beach Grove, Indiana -- arrived in New York in 1981 and was disappointed to realize that the Broadway of his boyhood dreams had been replaced by rock operas and musicals that celebrated felines over humans. With no crew, no budget and one digital camera, McKay's search to determine whether a Golden Age ever really existed brought the former actor-singer to four continents. That five-year journey featuring interviews with over 100 theatrical legends is captured in "Broadway: The Golden Age."

Among the film's highlights: Shirley MacLaine recalls her star-making performance in The Pajama Game when she filled in for the injured Carol Haney. Lainie Kazan remembers the despair of being replaced out-of-town in Seesaw by a young Michele Lee. Robert Goulet remembers his audition for and co-star Richard Harris' reaction to his reading for the role of Camelot's Lancelot. Stephen Sondheim, Hal Prince and Chita Rivera all relate stories about the groundbreaking musical West Side Story. And, Angela Lansbury explains nabbing the only role that she ever desperately wanted: Mame in Jerry Herman's Tony-winning musical.

The Angela Film Center is located in Manhattan at 18 West Houston Street; City Cinemas Sutton 1 & 2 can be found at 205 East 57th Street. Visit www.broadwaythemovie.com for more information.

The Spinning House got a boost when it became one of the collaborating organizations with the RiverCenter for the Performing Arts. Others are the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, Columbus State University and the Premier Series, Greater Columbus Youth Orchestra, the Columbus Ballet and Cantus Columbus.

The Spinning House is Wil Ennis' theater company. Ennis is Columbus' "theater baby," who grew up doing plays at the Springer Opera House and is now working at the RiverCenter as the creative services coordinator.

As artistic director of the Spinning House, he's come up with a very interesting season.

The big news is that Ennis' fund-raiser for the company features a big star. Bea Arthur, the star of TV's "Maude" and "The Golden Girls," will be here on Oct. 30 at 8 p.m. in the Bill Heard Theatre. She shares her stories about being in "Three Penny Opera" in the 1950s and as part of the ensemble cast of "The Golden Girls."

She sings 17 songs, including "If He Walked Into My Life," "It Never Was You," "Some People" and "Fifty" in the show. Her friend and music director Billy Goldenberg will accompany her.

There's a cryptic note about RiverCenter lighting coordinator Kevin Newton serving as the lighting technician during the production's premier. What, he was 12 when he did it?

Tickets are $28. And if you want to go to the party after the show, it's $100. I've heard it's worth it because Miss Arthur likes to hang out.

Thanks to PBS, we'll soon get a chance to see Bea and Angela Lansbury perform "Bosom Buddies" on a Tony telecast from years past. The number will be included on "Broadway's Lost Treasures II," scheduled to be shown during the August pledge drive on PBS affiliates. (I know that the two sang "Bosom Buddies" on the Tonys about six or seven years ago. But I don't know if they ever did their duet prior to that.)
