Bea came to the Lone Star State on two occasions in 2001, and I was lucky enough to see her show three times: twice in Austin and again in Galveston several months later. Although the show you'll be seeing in Scottsdale is basically the same as the one I saw in Texas, it's changed quite a bit over the years. So, you'll just have to tell us all about your evening with Bea.

Hi,
 First off, i'm so happy for everyone who had the chance to see our darling Bea doing her show recently...boy, what i'da done to trade places with one of them. I may have a chance to see the show in my own living-room- that is, if there's any truth to the internet rumors about a dvd release.

Speaking of a dvd release, i have a question: Does anyone know when Maude will finally be released? Many dvd news-sites have led me to believe they even hinted at it, in a couple of her recent interviews. Anyway, since it hasn't happened, i'm begining to doubt that it ever will. Bea came to the Lone Star State on two occasions in 2001, and I was lucky enough to see her show three times: twice in Austin and again in Galveston several months later. Although the show you'll be seeing in Scottsdale is basically the same as the one I saw in Texas, it's changed quite a bit over the years. So, you'll just have to tell us all about your evening with Bea.

If you saw her doing her show like I just did, here in Southern California (2/19), you'd think she'd be around another 20 years or so. My only regret is seeing the show without my mother, who passed away last year. She would have enjoyed it.

If you can't track down "Maude" on video, you might have better luck getting acquainted with Maude Findlay on "All in the Family." The character of Maude was first introduced to TV audiences in an AITF episode in which Maude played caregiver to the Bunker household. Bea's guest appearance proved so popular that Maude showed up on AITF yet again...this time in the pilot for her own TV show.

Hi there!

I found this on the internet, regarding the release of Maude on DVD:
<http://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B00005J09T/102-3101502-8731341?v=glance&n=130> (copy and pass the link to a new window, otherwise it's not gonna work ;))

I think that they will eventually get it out on DVD (c'mon, they HAVE to!!!), but I'm not sure how many "signatures" they need to get off of their behind to start the press and get it done already!

So, my advice is: keep on voting on the site, and hopefully the Season 1 will get out before the end of the year..

Have a good day,

Here's good news for those of you who (like me) haven't seen "Broadway: The Golden Age." PBS affiliates throughout the U.S. will be airing the documentary this month. Dates and times vary from city to city, but you can see a round-up of show times at the movie's Web site:

<http://www.broadwaythemovie.com/news.htm>

"Broadway: The Golden Age" is of interest to the folks on this message board because Bea is among the performers interviewed for the documentary.

Hi all ::

Some of you have emailed me that you were going to the Chicago show. I hadn't planned on going, but recently have had a change of heart and noticed that there are still some tickets left. So, I may end up going for the hell of it. I would love to meet other fans... almost more than seeing the show (I only say that because I have seen the show enough times, not because it is a bad show, of course!).

So, I wanted to ask if any of you would be interested in meeting up for a little while either before or after the performance? Do let me know, because I will gauge by the input that I receive back.

I don't know the area in University Park, but I'm sure we can find something close by.

So, let me know either on here or by email. kevin@beatricearthur.com

My PBS station showed "Broadway: The Golden Age" last night. Even though Bea just showed up briefly, it was a fascinating way to spend two hours (pledge breaks included). The version being shown on PBS is about half an hour shorter than the theatrical release that aired in different locations throughout the country. If you'd like to see the missing 30 minutes, you'll need to pledge $100 to PBS in exchange for a DVD.

Yes, I saw the ET segment as well. They also commented on Estelle Getty's battle with dementia. Very sad...
 Hopefully Bea will make a speedy recovery.

hahaha... gosh you make it sound so easy... pick up the phone and start calling.
 i just pass
 along things on what i am told/read on the internet... like most of us do here.
 people still believe that i have all these inside connections, no matter how many times that i tell people that i don't. it was announced a while back that the dvd was being recorded at the El Portal shows... i haven't heard anything else sense then so we can only assume that was still true. take it easy, ok! be patient.

Subject: Maude Episodes

Hi! I need some help on issues discussed on episodes of Maude. Does anyone know what (if any) episodes discussed legal issues besides the obvious Maude's Dilemma with the abortion episode. I believe there was an episode that discussed sexual harassment but I am not sure which one it was. Were any other legal issues addressed?

Also, were there any other episodes that discussed women issues besides abortion and menopause? Do you know which episode it was that addressed menopause?

OK, that I know I am asking for a lot but any information that you could give me would be greatly appreciated!

The show also dealt with the issue of her husband going through a bankruptcy and losing his business (appliance store) due to bad accounting practices discussed on a situation comedy in the past. Also there was her run (or appointment) to congress.

There was an episode where one of Walter's female employees comes on to him. That would be a sexual harassment issue, but I don't think they call
