Kev -

You may have to go to a user-approved group for awhile. Sad to say, some people have no life and think this kind of stuff is funny.

Whoopie.

Kick some a$$ and take some names, Kev! :)

Yes, I just switched it to moderation for new users... but in the past that didn't always work... So, we'll see how it goes in another round!

Thanks again guys!

P.S. I can't believe people have so much time on their hands to do this kind of stuff... I'm so jealous hahaha :)

How much have you already watched?

I got mine yesterday, and have already... devoured it. confesses in an undertone Yes, the whole 22 eps. I didn't INTEND to, but I stayed up all night, drinking hot tea, taking food breaks and a walk around once to clear my head, which didn't work. LOL I got into that half-asleep half-awake state where it just didn't seem to matter, and I kept thinking I'd just watch one more... one more. :) I did skip the one where she gets a ticket, because it seemed a little weak, but I'll watch it later. Same goes for the last two (I think two) on the final disc—I just didn't care about these newcomers (Jane and daughter) and their problems.

What a thoroughly delightful experience this was! Chemistry between Maude and Arthur is great, and I really like Maude and Walter's relationship. Tension and intensity are good. LOL I like it in books, and I liked it here. They're very sweet, even with all their shouting.

What can I say but that Bea is too amazing for words? I think I'm in love. Really.

I was concerned that buying a season of a TV program would be a waste of money, that I'd never want to watch it more than once, (I'm really NOT a TV person—until recently, I hadn't even owned one in about five years) but that won't be the case with Maude.

More later, when I'm more coherent. I've still only had four of the necessary eight hours of sleep.

It's amazing how addictive this show is, isn't it?! I was right like you: only one more episode, just another one.. Before I knew it, it was 4AM and I had only 3hrs of sleep left before waking up to go to work. I devoured the whole set in 2 days, and now I'm left wanting more! Lol! I'm glad you liked it, Christina.

Wow great to hear of your Maude experience! I think quite a few of us share your addiction... once you get started its hard to stop. I find this of a lot of Norman Lear shows (currently watching Mary Hartman) but, I made a point of not doing anything for the first and second day that Maude was released. I finished the 22 episodes over the two days... but would have sooner if I didn't have to work and eat and little sleep :) So I admire your new dedication. Now you will join the new club... 'What is taking Season 2 so long!' :)

Wow, that's something... watching the whole season at once... congratulations, I could never do that... I watched until "Maude's dilemma" now, which was a great episode for sure, and today I'll see how much I can make... I won't be home for a week, starting tomorrow, so I guess it will take a while for me to complete the series. So far I really liked it, I agree, the chemistry between Walter and Maude is great, I do like the daughter Carol and I am curious how Vivian will bring herself in from now on. Everybody, have a wonderful Easter time!

Bea's former costar, Rue McClanahan, is promoting her new book, "My First Five Husbands." Today, she appeared on "Good Morning, America" and was also scheduled to guest on "The View." I haven't seen the book, so I don't know if it offers any insight in "Maude" and "The Golden Girls." However, an interview with Rue in "TheaterMania" addresses the question of the much-rumored feud between Bea and Betty.

Says Rue: It "kind of falls into the realm of mean gossip. Bea is open about it privately, but I don't know that she's open about it in print. Nobody understood the reasons for it, least of all Betty."

I was wondering the same... I couldn't make it out if that really means that Bea and Betty didn't get along that well (as English is not my mother tongue sometimes I don't get the meaning not that god). Boy, that would be sad, I always thought they did get along so well together.

I can post the text of it to the list, if that would be acceptable. If not, I'll send it off list to anyone who asks.

I'm not sure if I can embed video on posts here, but I discovered a recent interview with Bea online where she discusses Maude, which can be found at <http://twinterviewsarchive.blogspot.com/2007/03/and-then-theres-maude-season-one.html>.

It was a pretty honest discussion about the release of Maude, and the subject matter discussed in the show.

A new interview of Rue McClanahan in "Entertainment Weekly" has something of interest to say about Bea and costar Estelle Getty. In it, Rue speculates that Estelle was "somehow unconsciously intimidated by Bea" during the taping of "The Golden Girls." Who would have guessed? The pair worked so beautifully together.

I'm not sure why, but this message board doesn't display links with long URLs properly. That may be why you were having problems with the link. If you just clicked on the blue part of the URL, then you were using an incomplete link.

Should you run into similar problems with a Yahoo! message in the future, try copying the entire URL, then pasting it into your Web browser. That should work.

By the time "The Golden Girls" hit the airwaves, Estelle was in her early 60s; perhaps the adjustment to a new medium was more difficult for her at that age than it would have been when she was a young woman.

According to playbill.com, Bea is among the illustrious members of an Honorary Gala Committee for A Musical Tribute to Jerry Herman, scheduled for May 20, 2007. The evening is a fundraiser for Encompass New Opera Theatre. It will be held at the National Arts Club in NYC.
