As far as I know, her next performance is scheduled in St. Louis on the 21st. So, I'm hoping that she flew home to L.A. this past Sunday or Monday.

I can only say what a scary day it has been. I live in CT - one and one half hours outside of NYC and since my building is right on the water we evacuated and closed down the building around noontime. I just can't believe that something like this can happen in this country - I go into NYC every now and then to do shopping - now I will have to rethink that one!OMG - hope everyone is safe in your family.Hopefully Bea arrived safely in LA before all this began.Maribeth

I am also going to see her again in November in PA so I also hope she continues the tour, but we must also be prepared if she does not - don't forget besides having a fear of flying Ms. Arthur is a native New Yorker and might still have friends and family there. The events are taking a toll on everyone in the country right now, but if you are from NY or live close to it you can't escape what has happened as everyoneI talk to has lost either family or friends or has family or friends who are missing.Maribeth Maribeth, when do you think we'll know for sure?The not knowing is killing me. Exactly one week from today, I have tickets to see her in St. Louis. I saw an ad for her show in their local paper and it of course said nothing about a cancellation but I just have to know whether or not she will do her show then.I've been so looking forward to seeing her again up until Tuesday's news of course. And I pray for Bea and her family, if they are living there. It's all so upsetting and I would not blame her for cancelling but I will be very disappointed.Please anyone who

Hello fellow Bea fans!!!!Yes Kevin, it truly was my dream come true!!!! And I have wanted to meet Bea for sooooo long now!Oh, the whole thing was an experience I'll never forget as long as I live!I saw her on opening night in St. Louis on Friday and the show was just awesome, Bea was awesome.I knew she would say something about the tragedy on September 11 and she sure did. In fact, it was the very first thing she talked about. As she was talking about it, she became extremely emotional and just about broke down crying and then said and I quote "LIFE HAS TO GO ON". But she then cheered up and said "so please, if something strikes you funny, laugh and if you wanna cry, that's ok too." Just love her attitude!!Then she went into her leg of lamb recipe as usual. It was my third time seeing her show, fourth time seeing her and I really think this was her very best show yet. I had absolutely no complaints. (I don't understand why some people do.) Oh but Bea was so great and she looked absolutely beautiful. She's so amazing.Anyway, before the show even started, I was bugging this security guy about Bea and he told me that he'd seen her arrive before I got there and that she looked tired and she was not happy about being brought in a cab and not in a Lincoln Town Car (as she prefers.)A few minutes later, I saw Bea's wonderful pianist Billy Goldenberg who was walking down the back stairs out into the parking lot. I thought ok this is my big chance! So I went up to him and shook his hand and we talked for a few minutes.He was without a doubt the nicest, sweetest guy in the world. Bea is right, he IS divine!!! I told him I'd seen Bea's show twice in Chicago but that I hadn't met her yet and it would be my dream come true. He was like "awww"! He said he would take me to meet Bea right now (before the show) but she doesn't really like meeting people beforehand. But he said after the show, I would be his guest and he would take me in to meet Bea!!!! I'm thinking this guy is the best!! So my dreams finally came true. After the show I hung around the back waiting to get the ok from the security guy from Billy to let me in. We were then escorted in and then Billy showed me into to Bea's dressing room. I just couldn't believe it! I saw Bea...she looked beautiful. And I was thinking this has to be a dream!! Then after the group before us cleared out and it was just Bea, me, my mom, and Billy, I was introduced to the one and only BEA ARTHUR! Oh. Bea was so very sweet and so very gracious. She even complemented my mom in that voice of hers and said "you look more like her sister than her mom"! She couldn't get over it! She thought we were sisters! Bea was so wonderful. I told her how much I loved the show and that I'd seen it twice before in Chicago and she said "oh the show has changed since then" then asked me "which did you like better?" I told her I liked this one the best which I really did. (She made 'The Man In The Moon' her final song.) I then asked her if I could get a picture with her and she didn't mind at all. I then told her that I wished I had a program for her to sign but I forgot them at my seat. She seemed sorry for me that I didn't have one and she was really trying hard to figure out where we could find one. Some nice man came in and handed her one and she signed it and she even...without me asking....put four X's on it and she told me they were little kisses. I'm tellin' you this woman is the sweetest!!!! I talked with her a couple minutes more then I realized I just HAD to ask her for a hug. I asked her if she wouldn't mind and she said something like "well, no!" She was really flattered. I could tell she really LOVED all the affection! And I was on cloud nine. I then said goodbye to her and I love you. And I don't know how many times I told her "this is a dream come true." IT WAS!!!! I felt soooooo lucky.LONG LIVE BEA!Jessica

Thanks for sharing that. I'd been wondering how she would address the Sept. 11th attacks.Early in the tour, she dropped "The Times They Are A-Changin'" because it was such a downer for the audience. Now, however, it might be appropriate.It's interesting how these last few days have afforded us a rare glimpse of celebrities as flesh-and-blood human beings. I have to say: I've been proud of the way they've been conducting themselves.

Jessica,This is a great story! Just judging from the type of person Ms. Arthur is, warm and caring, I knew that the tragedy would affect her, like many of us, in that way. I am so looking forward to seeing her again. I am going to Easton PA on November 6th. I just like her so much that seeing her live again would give me the lift that I need - my husband, who is older than me, just had a mild heart attack; I am an executive at an internet company that is still looking for funding, so by the time I see Bea again I might be out of a job, but I am still going to see her! - I will be driving 3 hours one way! It is one thing after another, but after the tragedy of 2 weeks ago it puts things into perspective.I have met her previously, but never enough time to really talk to her like you did and get a picture with her - this time I am going to try to do it! Good I feel like a middle-aged groupie!Thanks for sharing - please post pictures.Maribeth

Yes, Bea was absolutely wonderful. I'll never forget how very gracious and nice she was. Like I said, I really feel very lucky that I got to spend one-on-one time with her like I did. Yeah, when those horrible events unfolded on the 11th I just didn't know what would happen. Was it the end of the world, would I ever get to see Bea again? Would she cancel? I just had no idea at the time. And I almost wasn't even enthused about seeing her. It was such a hard time for everyone. But when Friday came around and I saw Bea's attitude, it was like everything's going to be okay ya know? She has a very comforting presence.She is so awesome.And I do want to say how sorry I am for Kevin. But when he does get back around to it, he will help me get my pictures up of me and Bea. They're great!Take care everybody!

Hi Kevin, (Or Whoever!) I was visiting your wonderful site, as usual, and I was in the "And then there's Bea" mini-site, and I always go to the "Other Cities" section first, and I was SO Ticked to see that there were some new pictures and stories added. So, I saw that you had some pictures in from Brad and Bill (which were GREAT), but, then I read about Jessica's story, and it said, "To see Jessica and Bea click here", and so, I clicked and there was only old photos I had already seen. I really want to see Jessica and Bea, so, can you please tell me where/when I will be able to see the picture?Thanks,Lauren
